REMARKS

Interview Summary

Applicant gratefully acknowledges the courtesy of Examiner Choi in granting a personal interview on October 6, 2005. Applicant concurs with the Examiner Summary of October 6, 2005, and adds the following observations:

The undersigned attorney argued that Claims 1, 21, and 27, particularly as currently amended, distinguished over US Patent 4,419,716 to Koo, and that the rejection of Claims 1, 21, and 27 over Koo should be withdrawn. This was because Koo teaches "a sealed vapor proof housing." In contrast, the term "liquid" is defined as having the properties of a liquid: being neither solid nor gaseous. Examiner Choi agreed that the claims, if rewritten as presently amended using the term "liquid-tight" would distinguish over "a sealed vapor proof housing," and obviate the basis of foregoing rejection.

During the interview the undersigned attorney also explained the medium (e.g., 20, Fig. 1) that contacts the external wall of the enclosure "cools the walls of the sealed environment very well and has a very good ability to remove heat from the system." Quoting from Spec. at Page 4, Lines 29-31. These concepts were discussed by Examiners Choi and Ward and the undersigned attorney in term of (1) the medium (e.g., 20, Fig. 1) having high thermal conductivity and (2) being substantially cooler than the external wall of the enclosure. Applicant has amended various claims to address the foregoing concepts (e.g., ¶¶ c of Claim 1), so as to further distinguish and define Applicant's invention. Such amendments are not directed to overcome any rejection.

During the interview it was also discussed the newly added Claim 33 states a negative limitation, but during discussion between the undersigned attorney and Examiner Choi it was decided that the claim language is sufficiently definite to be acceptable.
